

Technology Stumping You? We Make House Calls To Help You

It used to be that if you wanted to take pictures and share them with loved ones, the process was a rather simple one. Aim the camera, press the button, do it 23 more times and drive the roll of film down to the mall. An hour later (or a day if you wanted to save a little money), you'd pick up your pictures, sort the good from the bad and throw them in a drawer somewhere. Then, a few weeks or months down the road, you'd pull them out, spread them around on the coffee table and painstakingly stick them into a big photo album...which you'd then lug to your next family reunion and hope that someone had the patience to leaf through it.

As you're no doubt aware, things have changed. And believe it or not, they've gotten a whole lot easier. The problem, though, is that if you didn't learn the ins and outs of digital photography as they came along, discovering them all at once can be a little intimidating.

That's where TechProdigy comes in. Our team of Professional Mobile Technicians make house calls—you've probably seen them around town in their snappy little Mini Coopers—and not only are they fully versed in the wonders of digital photography, they also pride themselves on their ability to explain things to the uninitiated.

Once you learn what is possible and how easily it can be done, you'll be amazed at how technology will improve your ability to share your life with your loved ones. Pictures can now be instantly downloaded to your computer, where you can sort them, tag them and organize them any way you like. They can be sent to the camera store at the touch of a button, emailed to friends with the drag of a mouse or presented in online photo albums that can be accessed by people all around the world. You can even make top-quality prints in the comfort of your own home, or project pictures on your television screen in a modern version of the good old-fashioned slideshow.

TechProdigy can help bring digital photography into your life on terms you're comfortable with. Don't feel like you're being left behind any longer.
